HIBERNIANS WIN OUT OVER NEWBON A. A. IX.

Fray Was Fastest Played Here For Quite Some Time

FINAL SCORE ENDS 2 TO 1

(By T. M. Juno)

The Hibernians and the Newbon A. A. played a fast seven-inning game on Leedom's field yesterday afternoon as the Bristol team eked out a close 2-1 victory over the Trenton club. Rain prevented the game from being finished.

The fray was the fastest played in Bristol for quite some time. In fifty minutes the teams had completed seven frames and would have finished the entire fray in an hour and fifteen minutes at the rate they were playing. Both clubs possessed plenty of pep and kept the ball rolling at all times.

A bad start spoiled the afternoon for the visiting hurler, Duncan. After easily retiring the first two batters, Williams singled to center and stopped at third on Dougherty's two-bagger. Choma then drove in both runners with a rousing single past center base. McGinley kept up the work with a double, but Roe fanned, ending the canto.

That was the only scoring done off the invading hurler. He was touched for a double by Dougherty and another single by Choma in the third, but the hurler got out of the rut by retiring Joe Roe. The Hibs made eight hits, four coming in the first inning rally.

"Doc" Diehm did the serving for the Hibernians and gave up four hits to the Jerseyites. He was given ragged support, his mates committing four errors. One of the errors accounted for the only tally scored by Newbon. In the fifth with one out, Suntato reached base on Roe's error in center. Duncan fied out but Fasoli and DeSantis singled to score the catcher. This was the only bad inning Diehm had.

PINE BACK IN CELL

Camden, N. J., June 11.—Joseph "Jocko" Pine, 23, was back in his cell in the Camden County jail today after his unsuccessful break for freedom when he knocked the turnkey senseless with a section of the cell bar he had sawed off. Awaiting transfer to Trenton, N. J., to serve a 14 to 15 year term for hold-up, Pine sawed frantically at one of the bars and wriggling through the narrow space, he struck keeper Buchanan over the head with the bar and fled to the jail roof. A few minutes later head keeper A. ermano heard Buchanan's body slump to the floor and sounded an alarm and Pine's short-lived freedom ended when he was captured covering in back of a flight of stairs.

BELIEVE PLANE LOCATED

Livingstone Manor, N. Y., June 11.—New York state troopers early today declared they had tentatively located the missing American airliner with seven persons aboard in a mountain side at Beaver Kill Valley, about five miles from this city, in the heart of the Catskills.

Miss Esther Karch, proprietor of a ranch near here and two hired men in her employ, told Captain Fox of the State Police that she saw the plane pass over her property about 6 p. m. Saturday, and heard it crash a few minutes later against the side of the mountain.

Miss Karch's property is one of the most outlying farms in this section.

The mountain against which the plane is thought to have crashed is known as Debruce Mountain. A dozen troopers under Captain Fox began a search of the mountain side immediately after hearing Miss Karch's story. They were led by two civilians and one Indian tracker as it is virtually impossible for anyone unfamiliar with the terrain to penetrate the forest thickness.

"Bottoms Up" Opens at The Grand for A Two-Day Run

"Bottoms Up," which opens today at the Grand Theatre, is reported to be rich in comedy, romance and the glamour of Hollywood. Against this background, Buddy DeSylvia has filmed a romantic story.

"Pat" Paterson, charming importation from the English stage, makes her American film debut in "Bottoms Up." Playing the romantic leads opposite Miss Paterson are Spencer Tracy and John Boles. The comedy situations are contributed mainly by Herbert Mundin, Sid Silvers and Harry Green.

The picture contains four song numbers that promise to be hits. They are "Waiting at the Gate for Katy," "Turn on the Moon," "Little Did I Dream" and "I'm Throwin' My Love Away." Each of these numbers is reported to be catchy and tuneful. They are interwoven with an entertaining tale of three merry rogues and a girl with movie ambitions, who put on a swell front and crash the gates of a Hollywood studio. Through the conviving methods of her three companions, the girl finds herself playing a part opposite a famous male star she has secretly loved.

LAST INNING RALLY WINS GAME FOR JEFFERSON A. C.

(By T. M. Juno)

A last inning rally by the Jefferson A. C. gave that team a victory over the St. Ann's A. A. last night on St. Ann's field. The Mules scored four runs in the uprising and stopped the Saints, 5-3.

It was "Lefty" DiTanna who provided the blow which sent the Wood Streeters down to defeat. DiTanna drove in three runs during the game and his last two gave the Mules the margin of victory.

In the last inning the Jefferson team came to bat trailing by the score of 3-1. Jim Tullio lifted a long fly to fields for the first out. Leighton singled to left. B. Tullio hit to Pieo and Leighton was forced at second. B. Tullio's fast stepping prevented a double-play. Tullio stole second and scored on Purcell's hit to left. Britton walked. Ibrigt sent home Britton with the tying run of the game with a double to center. DiTanna followed with a single through the box and victory was in Jefferson's hands.

"Hokey" Leighton allowed the losers but three hits and kept them well scattered. Whyno gave up seven hits, but four of these came in the last frame.

Hiernians Win Out Over Langhorne Giants

The Hiernians were successful in their first exhibition game of the season, defeating the Langhorne Giants last night on Leedom's field. Final score was 7-3.

The Giants could not solve the offerings of Gene Lawler and were set back with five hits, two of these going to Spencer. The Hibs made ten hits and bunched them to score in each of the first four innings. "Ed" Roe led the Hiernians' attack with two triples.

Tomorrow afternoon on Leedom's field, the Hiernians will meet the leaders of the Trenton City Twilight League, the Newbon A. A. club.

The Harriman No-Names went into first position in the Bristol Junior Baseball League, yesterday, by turning back the Red Arrows, 15-3.

TULLYTOWN DEFEATED BY WHITE ELEPHANTS, 6 TO 5

The White Elephants came from behind again last night on Bath Road field to score three times in the seventh inning and defeat Tullytown 6-5. It was their fifth league victory of the season, to two defeats.

Going into the seventh inning on the short end of a 5-3 score, Hamm was safe when Carman dropped his pop-fly. B. Ritter was safe when Updyke threw to second, but Hamm beat the throw. McDevitt then singled and Hamm and Ritter both scored. Updyke then threw out Devine, and G. Ritter came through with the winning hit, a single to right, to score McDevitt, to win the game, 6-5.

Kirk pitched for the Elephants and had eight strike-outs to Rubie's two for Tullytown. Leigh for Tullytown and G. Ritter, Hughes and McDevitt all had two hits each.

LANGHORNE SPEEDWAY SCENE OF BIG EVENT TODAY

Langhorne Speedway, where the late Ray Keech, Jimmy Gleason, Frankie Farmer and others created motor speed history in days gone by, will back again in glory reflected from America's fastest racing cars and greatest drivers this afternoon, when an all-star field of dirt track and speedway talent gathers for 100 miles of sprint competition.

It will be a battle of champions with two Indianapolis Speedway title-holders, the Pacific coast AAA champion and the Atlantic coast AAA king, the Hankinson Speedways circuit winner, and the runner-up for the National AAA Championship crown clashing with other renowned rulers of the world of speed.

"Wild Bill" Cummings, winner of the 1934 Indianapolis 500 mile classic, tops the star-studded speed cast. Fred Frame, the 1932 Indianapolis winner, Al Gordon, who won the west coast title with a record of 17 races won in 18 starts, Bob Sall, the eastern color bear, Billy Winn, the Hankinson title-holder, and Lou Moore, third at Indianapolis last week and runner-up to Lou Meyer for the national championship crown last season, are other featured contenders entered.

Beside these high-powered knights of the roaring road, the entry rolls list two others who were among the first five to finish in the 1934 Indianapolis race. They are A. B. (Deacon) Litz, giant DaBols, Pa., ace, who was fourth, and Joe Russo, Chicago Italian star, who placed fifth. Babe Stapp of Los Angeles, a western pilot who held five Indianapolis records until Cummings shattered them this year, is another headliner who has entered. His appearance at Langhorne will be his first in the east.

All of the leading eastern contenders, including Bob Sall, Johnny Hanon, Ken Fowler, who defeated Mauri Rose, the second money winner at Indianapolis, at Dayton, O., last Sunday, Lloyd Vieaux, Malcolm Fox and others, will be on hand to match speed with the invaders.

STATE NEWS

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — Don't call a Pittsburgh cop a "flatfoot."

Only 3.82 per cent. of Pittsburgh policemen have spread-eagle arches, according to Dr. Daniel E. Soble, chief surgeon of the department of public safety.

The proportion, Soble says, is the lowest in the country.

KANE — (INS) — For a moment, night patrolman Jack McEwen thought he was suffering hallucinations.

Swinging his "night stick" as he walked home for an extra coat, McEwen met his wife fleeing from two panhandlers he "escorted" from town an hour before.

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — Benjamin Erlichman, blinded by holdup men 13 years ago, was one of the first of 337 sightless persons to receive interviews here preparatory to applying for a state pension.

KANE — (INS) — Widening of Kane-Mt. Jewett Road tops the Roosevelt Highway Association's 1934 program.

President C. F. Brown, Corry, president, has called an association meeting for June 14th to hear reports on improvements in progress or contemplated.

BROWNSVILLE — (INS) — For nearly 85 years, the first cast-iron tubular bridge ever built in America has carried National Pike traffic over Dunlop Creek, near here.

The stage coaches and Conestoga wagons that once rumbled over the bridge carrying pioneers to the distant West are replaced now by a constant stream of automobiles and trucks that race along the historic highway, built when the nation was young.

Although the old span now bears heavier loads than were ever dreamed of by the two United States Army Engineers who designed and built it, the bridge is still regarded as safe by modern engineers.

"If given a good coat of paint it ought to last 100 years more," a local resident says.

The construction of the bridge, according to old records, was supervised by George W. Cass, a lieutenant in the United States Army, from designs made by Capt. Richard Delafield, another Army Engineer. Cass later resigned from the Army and became a merchant here.

CARLISLE — (INS)—Honorary degrees will be conferred upon eight men, one of them Dr. John Dickinson, Assistant U. S. Secretary of Commerce, at the 181st Dickinson College Commencement Monday morning, June 11th.

Dickinson, great-great grandnephew of John Dickinson, one of the founders and for whom the college is named, will deliver the Commencement address. He will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

Vance C. McCormick, Harrisburg publisher and former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, also will receive the Doctor of Laws award.

The New California Comet

—By BURNLEY—

Alice MARBLE
THE HARDEST HITTING
WOMAN TENNIS PLAYER--THIS 20-YEAR-OLD SAN FRANCISCO GIRL
WILL MAKE HER WIMBLEDON DEBUT IN THE WIGHTMAN CUP MATCHES--

THE youngest of California's tennis stars, Miss Alice Marble, is sure to make a big impression on British net followers next week when she makes her debut at Wimbledon in the Wightman Cup matches.

A statuesque blonde, the twenty-year-old Miss Marble possesses the most severe service of any woman tennis player in the world. Her style of play is modeled closely after the slashing, forcing attack of the leading men players. Using a distinctly masculine type of game, Alice is capable of attacking at the net with a success that Mrs. Moody could never attain because of her faulty footing.

In her first European appearance, playing on the St. Cloud courts in France, press reports noted that the galleries repeatedly applauded Miss Marble's terrific service deliveries, the like of which had never been seen before in women's tennis on the other side.

San Francisco's newest net prize at present holds down the No. 3 place in the national ranking, being surpassed only by the two Helens—Jacobs and Moody. Keen judges of the court game predict that inside of a couple of years, at most, Miss Marble will stand supreme among the feminine racquet wielders of the world.

Faster on her feet and a harder hitter than Mrs. Moody, the new San Francisco phenom also employs a terrific chop stroke that is already as devastating as any in the repertoire of that chop-stroke specialist, Helen Jacobs.

Miss Marble will be a singles starter in the coming Wightman Cup matches, and will meet the world's best woman tennis players at Wimbledon late this month when Britain's greatest net classic gets under way.

Alice admits that she has her heart set on winning the national title, and she will surely make a desperate bid for Helen Jacobs' honors next August. Her father has promised to buy her an automobile whenever she finally crashes through to victory in the national classic, and the hard-hitting blonde from Frisco would like to get that car this summer.

A RARE OCCURRENCE

Most Americans probably read with smiles of amusement of the furore created in London by the shooting of a policeman by a burglar. Although the policeman was not seriously wounded, great excitement was created, and the burglar, when cornered, killed himself rather than fall into the hands of his pursuers.

The shooting of the policeman was blazoned across the front pages of newspapers in eight-column headlines. Arms were issued to policemen—something very unusual in England—who took up the trail of the burglar, and the officers were assisted by hundreds of volunteer man-hunters. Bloodhounds, airplanes, motor cycles, automobiles and even bicycles were employed in the hunt.

It is a rare thing for English criminals to go armed. This is because of the severe penalties for carrying weapons and because of difficulty in obtaining the latter. The police are armed only with their sticks. If a burglar has a pistol on him when captured, he gets an additional seven years for this offense. And when a sentence is meted out in England it usually is served.

While the excitement caused by the London shooting may have proved amusing to Americans, so hardened are they to single and multiple killings by gangsters, it really was deserving of a more sober view. The fact that violent crime of this kind is so rare in England is something to be pondered in a nation where kidnappings and killings and minor forms of criminality occur with daily frequency, and the perpetrators often go uncaught.

THE BOY SCOUTS

Membership and finances are not the major items of interest in connection with the Boy Scouts of America; the twenty-fourth annual meeting of which organization was held the other day in Buffalo, N. Y. They nevertheless, do throw important light on a movement which is accomplishing tremendous good among American boys.

The organization now has more than 1,000,000 members, the annual report showed. Nearly a quarter of a million men are engaged as scoutmasters in directing their activities. Despite the depression, the organization was shown to be in a sound financial condition, the income last year being approximately $750,000.

The primary importance of the organization lies in the value to the scouts themselves of the training they receive in things, that will make them good citizens. But it is a tenet of their order also to be of help to others, and instances of how they do this are numerous in every community where there is a scout organization. Last year, in response to a request from President Roosevelt, the scouts took an active part in relief work, among the results being the collection of 11,000,000 articles of clothing and other articles for distribution among the needy.

The United States has just reason to feel proud of its scout organization and of the steady growth it is experiencing.

These traps police set to catch escaped criminals appear to be about as effective as some mouse traps we have known.

Echoes of The Past

By Louise White Watson

A Little Cream Jug

So many stories of old-time life mention a little old cream jug, often openly placed on one of those old-fashioned mantels and holding the "bit of change" that it might be handy when the peddler came along, with his wares of this, that and the other. Pins, needles, shoelaces, combs, a bit of gingham, hairpins, "gallasses," in short, what all didn't the itinerant peddler carry?

One day an old man, unstrapping his pack, glanced quickly at the mantel and questioned eagerly, "Where did that little cream pitcher come from?" The housewife, fearing his eyes might be gimlet-like for boring into the depths where she kept her "change," warded off the question, only to have him come back even more intently, "The little pitcher, May I see it?" So earnest was he in his request, she, with the excuse it needed a good dusting, hurried out to the pump with it, emptied what little money it contained, and then held it forth for the inspection of the old peddler. It was only about four inches high, had a plump middle with a little touch of green vine on it. The old man reached out for it, held it gently with his bent fingers, turning it this way and that, and then turned to the housewife and said: "There was a little old cream pitcher just like this, in our family. Mother loved it and we children were only allowed to touch it while she was holding it. I've often wondered what became of it. It, too, stood on the mantel-piece. Yes, that was many years ago, many years ago." Then, setting the pitcher down carefully, he continued, "It has the same sparkle, the same deep glow of the lovely old luster-ware that ours had." His pack remained unheeded. "What is luster-ware?" questioned the housewife. "O," he answered, "It is the pottery that catches and holds the fancy of all ages, from childhood on up through the years. You'll find it today in museum, in locked cabinets, and on the high-up shelves where children's hands can't pull it down to admire it."

Reveries

"Were the little cream pitcher and its dainty mates brought out for a tea," he continued. The housewife rubbed her eyes. Could she be dreaming? She interrupted him, bringing him back to the old farm kitchen from the dreamy haze where he had been wandering. "But who are you besides being a peddler?" she questioned. "Here you go on over that little old cream pitcher, and ten to one, it's got a crack in it—as though you were off with the high and mighties." "One life," he answered, "when one lives with luster ware. Many a 'hired girl,' as they once called them, has gone off into sulks because the missus wouldn't let her handle her luster ware."

One read up on this wonderful pottery production. Saw the fluted Queen Anne teapot, with its exquisite shape and gloss, so dainty one feared it might suffer even with the most careful handling. Luster ware was first produced in that far-away land of Persia, back in the 14th century, the Moors taught the Spaniards how to make the golden-red and pale yellow luster dishes, always decorated with Saracenic designs. "Burnished and bright, and fountain clear, my ruddy gaze!" Then in the last quarter of the 18th century, luster ware was made in England, and it soon became a common sight both in England and America. George Washington used a copper luster mug for shaving. There is the silver and the copper and the gold luster. One reads that Wedgwood made the first silver and copper luster in 1776. There is a very choice historic piece of copper luster, the Cornwallis jug. On one side is the picture of Cornwallis's surrender at Yorktown, with the caption, "Cornwallis resigning his sword, October 17, 1781," while on the reverse side is a portrait of Lafayette being crowned with laurel by two nymphs. England and France, over here in America fighting against and for the country led by a Washington. Wedgwood carried this fine art into wonderful candlesticks, dishes of basket-work and fruit plates. The gold or purple luster is exceedingly lovely, the purple, gold and pink merging into each other so perfectly that the lines are difficult to draw between them.

Back to the Peddler

"But," one questioned, "do you really believe the old man knew the worth, the genuine beauty of the little old cream pitcher?" Another suggested, "Might it not simply have been a touch of sentiment, carrying him back to his boyhood home, and recalling the way his mother had prized it? But tradition stalks to the front with the question, 'Have I not, all through the years, cautioned those now in possession of that which is rare, to pass that knowledge on down through the coming generations? Too much has already been lost. The ocean keeps its secrets, knowing well that many a 'gem of purest ray,' will live happily with the waters moaning, and foaming, but my secrets, given now and then to man to perpetuate—for instance the making of the little old cream pitcher with its wonderful, glorious coloring, must be handed on lest only I and Echo will recall that exquisite work. Sentiment, I admit, often assists in preserving the beautiful, but to my way of thinking, the old peddler had a strong touch of both sentiment for the little pitcher back on Mother's mantel, and of the dainty tracings she had taken time out of her busy life, to show her boy, knowing he would understand. 'See,' she explained, 'right here is where the delicate division comes,' and he, all attention, proud to be taken in as one with mother and the little old cream pitcher, answers, 'Yes, Mother, I see and I'll remember.'"

His Onward Way

It was only after he had gone and she went to replace the pitcher, remembering to go into the other room for the "change" that she recalled he hadn't offered her a thing for sale, simply strapped his pack slowly as though still back with the little pitcher, and then with a smile on his worn, wrinkled face, he bade her good-day and was off, on down the road, the road that knew him and looked for him year after year. Forgotten are his wares. Mother is journeying lovingly with him, rejoicing that the little old cream pitcher has brought her boy once more into such close touch with her and the old home.

Miners' Friend Seeks State Governorship

Miss Josephine Roche

During Strike at Columbine Mine

Miss Josephine Roche, Colorado mine operator, who has thrown her hat in the ring for the Democratic nomination for Governor of her State, is a pioneer "New Dealer." Back in 1928, when Colorado was in the throes of a bloody mine war, she amazed the coal moguls by buying out her associate stockholders in the Rocky Mountain Fuel Co., assuming control and inviting the workers to unionize her properties, at one of which, the Columbine Mine, six men had been killed and 35 injured in battle with troops a short time before. The result of that bold stroke is that today Colorado miners are the best paid in the entire country and Miss Roche's company made money all through the depression. A graduate of Vassar College and Columbia University, Miss Roche has held many municipal posts in Denver. She is sure she'll be next Governor of Colorado and promises a "New Deal" in State government.

"MA CINDERELLA" by Harold Bell Wright

CHAPTER XXIX.

"I sure am interested, Mr. Belden. Leastways, I be if your place is the sort of place I'm a-wantin'. I may's well tell you right now, though, we-uns ain't a-wantin' nothin' less'n the best what's to be had."

"Good!" ejaculated the lawyer. "I can assure you that this home is complete in every detail. It is distinctly a home of culture and refinement—a home of the best traditions. And, fortunately, it stands exactly as it was when the late occupant left it—the furnishings, the paintings and works of art, the library, the automobiles—even to the butler who has had the management of the establishment for years. The butler, you understand, has been held to look after things pending some disposition of the property. Everything is in readiness for immediate occupancy. The grounds, I should add, are ample and very beautiful. It is all a bit old-fashioned, perhaps, and the city has grown up around it, but, as I say, it is distinctly a home of culture, of good taste, fine traditions, and beauty. But why not drive out with me right now and inspect the property—see it for yourself? My car is waiting. It will require only a little time. Really," he smiled—"now that I know you as Judge Shannon's friends, I am anxious, for more than business reasons, to see you settled in this ideal home."

"Hit all sounds fine, Mr. Belden," Ann returned. "But—well, sir, I war figgerin' on gittin' Nance an' me some clothes first thing. These we air a-wairins all right fer whar we come from, but—" She finished with a laugh.

"Oh, you ladies!" cried the bachelor, gaily. "But think how much easier you'll do your shopping with your own automobile and chauffeur, Mrs. Haskel." He looked at John Herbert. "I am sure your son will agree with me that you will be infinitely more comfortable in the privacy of your own home with your own servants than you can possibly hope to be in this public place—particularly as the city, I understand, is new to you."

"I'm sure Mr. Belden is right, mother," said John Herbert. "It will take only an hour or two, and it seems to be exactly what we want."

"Really," added the lawyer, with his ready smile, "it would be an ideal place for you to entertain your friend, Judge Shannon, the first time he comes to the city."

Ann Haskel arose abruptly. "I reckon we may's well settle hit first as last. Git your bonnet, Nance."

To Belden and her son she added: "Nance'd be scared plum' to death if I war to leave her hyear alone."

All during that ride in Mr. Belden's car from the hotel to the home in which he was trying to interest her, Ann Haskel was absorbed with thoughts which, apparently, she could not share with her companions. For the first time since leaving Wilderness Station the mountain woman took no interest in her surroundings. She was as indifferent to the roaring city which surged about them as if she had been born and reared in a crowded tenement district. Her son noticed his mother's mood and wondered uneasily. Could he have known the memories which had been aroused—the dead hopes which had been awakened—the banished dreams which had come again at the lawyer's smiling suggestion that she might entertain her friend, Judge Shannon—the last of the Haskels would have been astounded.

But when the automobile turned from the busy traffic of the street and stopped before tall, proudly designed iron gates in a high stone wall, the mountain woman awoke to her surroundings. The gates were opened for them to enter, and closed behind them to shut out the city which on every side besieged the walls with noisy turmoil. As the automobile moved slowly up the long tree-shaded drive between wide lawns of velvet smoothness, and shrubs and flowers of many varieties, toward the house which stood with all the proud dignity of other years to receive them, the young man caught his mother's arm with quick delight.

Ann, thrilling to the touch of her boy's hand, whispered, with full understanding, "Hit's jest like that thar fairy place I done read about once, whar the princess and everythin' war asleep, waitin' for the prince to come along an' wake 'em all up with a kiss." Which, we must allow, was a remarkable observation to come from a woman of Ann Haskel's general reputation.

Nance Jordan drew a long breath. "Smell the trees an' grass an' everythin'! Hit's jest like 'is at home, ain't hit? Only prettier up a mite more. I'd sure like to walk on that grass an' feel hit under my feet—if a body dast."

They were met at the door by a grave-faced elderly man who bore himself with a fine air of mingled authority and deference, and who greeted Mr. Belden with restrained friendliness.

With a quiet little laugh, Ann turned to the lawyer: "I'll buy hit, Mr. Belden, jest as hit stands. How much?"

"This is Wilson, the butler of whom I told you, Mrs. Haskel," said the lawyer. "Wilson, this is Mrs. Haskel and her son Mr. John Herbert, and Miss Jordan. Is everything in order for Mrs. Haskel to inspect the place, Wilson?"

"Right, sir. This way, if you please, madam."

From room to room they followed Wilson silently. In describing that home the lawyer had not exaggerated. Several generations of true culture had contributed to its charm and beauty. There was not a false note anywhere. There was not the faintest touch of vulgar display.

Wealth was evidenced on every hand, it is true, but never for itself.

John Herbert was delighted beyond expression. Nance crept on tiptoe, with frequent glances over her shoulder as if fearful of being pounced upon and dragged off to prison for being "wider sich as we-uns ain't got no right to be." Ann Haskel was as one walking in a dream. Now and then she crowded close to her son's side and put a questioning hand on his arm, as if she needed to reassure herself by his presence.

When the inspection was over, the mountain woman, in her rude backwoods speech, expressed accurately the feeling of the place: "Hit's plum' easy to see that the folks what lived hyear war sure-nough quality. I've allus sort of knowed thar'd be houses like this fer the right sort of folks to live in. But I sure never 'lowed I'd git a chance to see one of 'em with my own eyes."

Then she paid what lawyer Belden considered a beautiful tribute to her son: "Hit sure fits you, Herb. Seems 'like hit war jest natchally made fer you. Do you reckon you could make out to do your writin' hyear?"

There was no need for John Herbert to put his answer into words.

ture the suggestion, madam, I think you and your family would be much happier dining at home this evening."

Ann looked at her son and her dark eyes were fairly dancing with delight. "I reckon me an' Herb could stand hit," she drawled. "But mebbe Nance'd rather go back to the hotel."

"Now, Ann Haskel," whined Nance, "you know good an' well what I'm a-wantin'. You ain't got no call to make fun of me jest 'cause we-uns air in the city. You didn't never used to do hit back home."

When Mr. Belden was leaving he said: "I'm sure you will find Wilson invaluable, Mrs. Haskel. He has been in charge here for years. You can trust him to manage everything for you perfectly. I suggest that you advise with him freely. I imagine he can even tell you about the proper dressmakers. He is wise, experienced in all the ways of his former employers, and he never betrayed a confidence in all his life. As for myself, please feel free to call upon me at any time. I shall be most happy to serve you."

As the mountain woman and her son stood on the veranda, watching the lawyer's automobile down the drive, Ann said, in an awed half-whisper: "Hit's all jest like the story, ain't hit, Herb?"

"What story, mother? What do you mean?"

"You know," she answered—"the fairy godmother, the chariot, the palace—hit's jest like thar war somebody a-managin' hit all fer poor old Ma Cinderella." She laughed with a little catch in her voice. "I'm sure hopin' hit don't all vanish clean away com' midnight. I'd hate to wake up a-sittin' in the cinders back home an' find all this war jest nothin' but another dream."

PRINCESS' GOWN IS FEATURED BY RETURN OF THE PETTICOAT

By Nadia De Beaud
(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)
PARIS — (INS) — At a recent luncheon given by Mrs. James Corrigan in honor of the new British Ambassador Sir George Clerk and Lady Clark in a private salon of the Ritz hotel, there were such well-known Americans as Mme. Jacques Baisson, the former Miss Vanderbilt, Lady Mendil, the Princess de Fancigny Lucinge, Mme. Paul Dupuy, owner of one of the largest Parisian newspapers and many others.

I noted especially the Worth gown worn by the Princess de Fancigny-Lucinge, for it featured the return of the petticoat. It was in a brightly printed crepe. A short cape of a grass green moire ribbon and a plisse petticoat of the same green added novel touches. The train was short. She wore for warmth a silver fox collar, made of several skins to form a short cape.

CEREMONIAL GOWNS OF WORTH FAMOUS FOR THREE GENERATIONS

By Nadia De Beaud
(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)
PARIS — (INS) — The opening of the London season and the presentations at the Court of Saint James have a vivid repercussion in Paris for invariably a number of the gowns are made here. And there is one house, that of Worth, which has made itself famous for three generations past by its ceremonial gowns.

Of the thirteen Americans presented at Court, I saw the gown worn by Miss Leslie Bogert, of New York, whose parents are socially prominent in Paris. Her gown was in white tulle, that color being the preferred one this year, with triangular plisse inserts on the skirt and forming little epaulettes. The shoulders were bare, with tiny puff sleeves below made of white flowers. The train, to handle which the debutantes have to take many a lesson, was in silver lame.

EMILIE CONTINUES TO WIN; DEFEATS PHILA. NINE

EMILIE, June 11—Emilie A. A. continued its winning streak here yesterday afternoon, beating the highly-touted Kirlin Catholic Club, of Philadelphia, 7-4.

The game was halted in the third inning because of a shower and this seemed to aid the Emilieites in chalking up the win, as at the time the visiting hurler, Harron, was going great. His arm seemed to get cold because of the delay, and when he returned to the hill he was plastered by the Emilie batsmen. Three hits and two errors scored three runs and ruined the afternoon for the Philadelphia team.

Howard Black and Benny Paul were the leaders of the winners' attack, getting three bingles each. Black had a single, double, and triple, driving in two runs and scoring one. Watson fanned fourteen batters.

EDGELEY, June 11—The Edgely Braves-Philadelphia Ukrainians game was called in the third inning because of rain yesterday afternoon. At the time, the Braves were leading, 8-5. JEFFERSON A. C. WINS

The Mules hit the ball hard and made victory certain in the eighth when they scored six times. Reds McCurry was the winning hurler, pitching the entire game. He allowed five hits and fanned sixteen batters. The invaders scored all their tallies in the first and fourth innings. Visa and DePaul pitched for the losers, with the defeat going to DePaul.

Jr. Catholic Daughters Take Part in Mass, Breakfast

One hundred ten members of the Junior Catholic Daughters of America, Bristol Court, were in attendance at nine a. m. Mass and partook of Holy Communion at St. Mark's Church, yesterday, and later attended the communion breakfast at St. Mark's school hall.

Counsellors participating were: the Misses Mary McFadden, Mary McGee, Frances McFadden, Anita Lynn, Catherine Strong, Margaret and Mary Roarty and Mrs. Margaret Murphy. Miss Marie Gaffney, grand regent of the Senior Catholic Daughters, Bristol Court, was in attendance as their representative.

Father Murphy introduced Father Glass, the new chaplain of the society, to the members. The Rev. Glass asked the blessing.

Miss Marguerite Gallagher, president of the Juniors, introduced the speakers. Miss Gallagher dwelt on the basic principles, "Service To God" and "Helpfulness To Others," which constitute part of the motto of the organization.

Miss Gaffney reminded the young folks of their faithfulness to Miss Besie Rafferty, chairlady of the organization, during the past year, and of Miss Rafferty's loyalty to the troops. Miss Gaffney hoped for a continuation of the good work.

Miss Anita Lynn, past grand regent of the senior branch, Bristol Court, spoke a few words of greeting. She congratulated the young people on their excellent showing, and told them how well pleased she was to know that such a large group of young people, studying and following the splendid principles of the association, had been organized during her term of office as grand regent.

A message from the Rev. Mealey, the former chaplain of the young people, was delivered by Miss Eleanor Armstrong. Father Mealey through Miss Armstrong thanked the Juniors for their kindness to him, while here, and wished them continued growth.

Reports from the secretaries of the various troops, were read. Thirty No. 1 honor pins and 25 No. 2 honor pins were bestowed upon those passing tests. A sacred heart pin was given each member.

The breakfast was prepared by Mrs. Catherine Lynn, the Misses Mary McFadden and Catherine Strong, Mrs. Marvel Durham, and Mrs. Neal McIlvaine.

BIENNIALS ALL GARDENS NEED

Canterbury Bells

Some gardeners are inclined to fight shy of biennials, which are plants that must be started fresh from seed every year to keep them in stock as they bloom their second year and then die. Foxgloves and Canterbury bells are the commonest biennials and two of the most beautiful subjects. While frequently grown together, they like soils of entirely different character to be at their best.

The Canterbury bell favors a lime

In Law's Toils

Jean Compton, 21, who was captured at Waterloo, Ia., at the time Tommy Carroll, Dillinger aide, was fatally shot in battle with police. At first she told officers she was Carroll's wife, but later admitted they were not legally married, she having a husband in Chicago.

Baer-Carnera Fit to Fight

Following charges of Boxing Commissioner Bill Brown that Max Baer was in no condition to do battle with Primo Carnera for the heavyweight championship, the two gladiators are shown as they underwent a thorough physical examination by the commission's physician. Both men were pronounced in excellent condition, so the fight's on June 14.

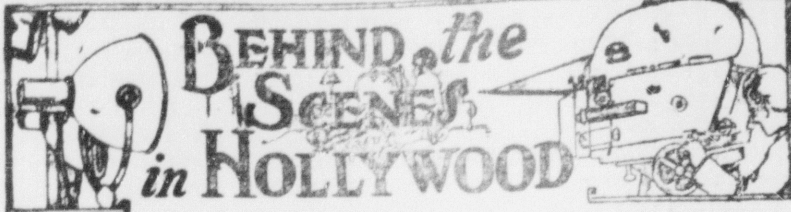

soil while the foxglove luxuriates in acid quarters, being naturally a woodland plant. It is best to start these two biennials now to have big plants to store in cold frames for the winter, the only really safe way of being certain of having them as they winter-kill badly in many sections, being unable to stand winter wet although perfectly hardy so far as cold is concerned.

Another biennial which is slowly growing into favor because of its stately grace, long a favorite in English gardens, is the mullein or verbasicum. The stately spikes of light yellow and pure white blooms are beautiful as associates for the stately delphiniums. The mulleins bloom for the greater part of the summer. Once you have them you always have them as they are free seeders and their chief drawback is the necessity of hoeing up myriads of young mulleins each spring. However, they are an easily disposed of plant as one swipe of the hoe finishes them.

A mullein for the rockgarden is a perennial. This is the Phoenician mullein which has dark green corrugated leaves lying flat on the ground and airy spikes of bloom no more than 18 inches high at most, in pinks, flesh and rosy purple tones. It is a plant for a shaded portion of the rock garden where its rosettes and graceful spikes are very ornamental.

The Sweet William is another biennial although it is not so truly biennial in character as the foregoing plants as often it will live for several seasons. It is best, however, to treat it as a biennial and raise fresh plants each year.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — When she made her first appearance on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot since "Queen Christina" was finished, Greta Garbo did something which some think is a step toward coming out of her long, self-imposed isolation.

Greta Garbo

In slacks and dark glasses, the Swedish sphinx visited the stage where "The Merry Widow" is being made. This is the first motion picture set she has been on outside of the picture she was actually making.

The invitation to visit came from Ernst Lubitsch, with whom she has been friendly ever since she came to America. After chatting briefly with Director Lubitsch, Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald, she watched them make a scene and then slipped silently away.

Every one on the set was agog after she had left. They rushed up to Lubitsch to find out what the Scandinavian enigma had to say.

"That," said he, taking a fresh grip on his cigar, "I can never tell!" So you see, the Nordic riddle is as mysterious as ever.

That was an amusing hub-bub on "The Scarlet Letter" set the other day. Colleen Moore makes her entrance as Hester and the mob was ordered to stand up. The cameras started and Robert Vignola shouted "cut." A man with a long beard was still sitting down. Again the scene was stopped. The fellow was still sitting down.

An assistant rushed in and got the fellow's attention over the heads of the crowd. "But I am standing," the extra said frantically, stretching up on his toes. He was a tiny chap about five feet two.

Helen Lowell, Warners' character actress, joins the Hollywood club for those who ran away from home. She did it at 12, to go on the stage. Joe E. Brown did it at nine, to be a circus clown. Al Jolson ran away at 12; W. C. Fields fled to the show business at 10. Wallace Beery ran away to take care of the elephants in a circus.

The Mock Trial benefit held last week for London's King Edward's Hospital brought these sentences:

Constance Cummings was ordered to use an Oxford accent for three years. Tallulah Bankhead was sentenced to be a siren two centuries back, deprived of her sex appeal.

There's dark secrecy on the R-K-O lot. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers have concocted a new dance for "The Gay Divorcee." It is being rehearsed behind locked doors and will be shot on a closed set. No one will see it until it is "in the can." Sole clue is that it will be a variation of the famous Irene Castle waltz. Zion Myers, who produces the film, believes it will fit the current vogue for the slower dance measures now creeping over the country.

The latest form of party-crashing in Hollywood is done by the use of the radio. Douglas Fowley, Universal's discovery now on loan to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was entering a few friends. A joker called up a radio station and had them announce the fact and invite every one over. An hour after Fowley said good-night to his guests and retired, a fresh crowd burst into his place all ready to carry on with the gay times.

By two hours by rain and poor starting. The feature event did not get under way until nearly 7 o'clock. Hannon, in winning the trial heat, set the fine time of nine minutes and 21 seconds to average 96.2 miles per hour, excellent speed for dirt track driving.

In qualifying for the competition, the Conshohocken speedster won from "Wild Bill" Cummings, who on Memorial Day raced to victory in the 500-mile Indianapolis classic. Hannon approached a track record which incidentally is held by Cummings at 36.1 seconds for the mile spin. His time was 37 seconds.

Driving a powerful Dusenbury-Miller Special owned by Freddie Frame, Mackenzie won the second 15-mile event in a breeze. Doc, veteran at the Langhorne track, was never out of the lead and, while his time was slower than that set in the previous race, it was an exciting run. Fox and Russo finished in second and third positions, respectively.

In making Chesterfields

...we use mild, ripe Turkish and Domestic tobaccos... tobaccos carefully selected for their smoking qualities; that is, for their good taste and mildness.

the cigarette paper

...that we use for Chesterfield is tested again and again for three things... purity, the right burning quality, no taste or odor. The right paper adds to Chesterfield's milder better taste.
